Keep Sun out of Baby's Eyes this Summer with Baby NapCap!

July 09, 2010

Teri Macy

Imagine strolling through the park or driving in your car and your baby is trying to sleep but can't because the sun is beaming in his or hers little eyes? Putting on Baby NapCap means it's time to sleep!

Baby NapCap is not sunglasses, nor a sun hat, but more like an awning shade that would be raised and lowered. The concept is all new, though very simple. To visualize the NapCap think of a comfortable, washable cotton baseball cap with a bill that is not firm. The portion that fits on the head is soft and expandable. The bill or veil is delicate polyester that falls down over the eyes and has been made of light material in a shape that floats over the baby's nose so as not to interfere with breathing. It calms the baby and promotes sleep safely. When NapCap is not being used to shield the baby from light and distractions, the veil is multi-functional and can be worn up like a typical baby cap, it can be lowered half way to become a sun visor or it can be reversed and shield the back of the babies neck as a sunshade.

Launched in November 2009, Baby NapCap sold out on Baby Steals in one day! Featured on Better Mornings television as a great find for Father's Day. Parents and caregivers are finding the NapCap to be the perfect aid and solution to sleep problems with babies. A simple yet ingenious design blocks out light and distraction safely to help baby sleep.

Teri Macy is a mother of two children, grandmother of four children, wife, and business entrepreneur in Interior Design, Real Estate and Property Management.

Teri is not new to creative business as she started an Interior Design company in 1977 that is still operating today. Teri founded Baby NapCap, LLC with only the idea of helping mother's solve the problem of getting babies to sleep in the busy world of today. She knows NapCap is the creative solution to easy napping for mothers and babies.

Upon the birth of her fourth grandchild, Teri was inspired to create the product known as NapCap to solve the common problem of too much light and distractions in this busy world for little babies to get to sleep. She knew that overly stimulated babies have trouble relaxing and falling asleep.

Teri's hope is that she has developed a product that will help mothers and babies everywhere and every day. NapCap is a cue for babies to sleep. NapCap means Naptime.

Teri enjoys babysitting her grandchildren and traveling with her husband, especially to new, unique destinations. She is an active tennis club player for 20 years and a Race Walker enthusiast for 7 years. Her hobbies include gardening and painting and drawing.

Teri has received the following recognition and awards:
 San Diego State University Sophomore Woman of the Year
